

The Alleghanian.

T. TODD HUTCHINSON, Publisher.

I WOULD RATHER BE RIGHT THAN PRESIDENT.—HENRY CLAY.

TERMS: $2.00 PER ANNUM.
$1.50 IN ADVANCE.

VOL. 1.

EBENSBURG, PA., THURSDAY, JUNE 7, 1860.

NO. 42.

DIRECTORY.

PREPARED EXPRESSLY FOR "THE ALLEGHANIAN."

LIST OF POST OFFICES.

Post Offices.
Zion's Creek, Bethel Station, Carrolltown, Chess Springs, Cresson, Ebensburg, Fallen Timber, Gallitzin, Glen Connell, Johnstown, Locetto, Mineral Point, Munster, Pershing, Plattsville, Reiland, St. Augustine, Scalp Level, Summit, Sumner, Wilmore.

Post Masters.
Joseph Graham, Joseph S. Mardis, Benjamin Wirtner, Danl. Litzinger, John J. Troxell, Mrs. H. M'Gaughey, Isaac Thompson, J. M. Christy, Joseph Gill, Wm. M'Gough, H. A. Buggs, Wm. Gwinn, E. Wissinger, A. Durbin, Francis Clement, Andrew J. Ferral, G. W. Bowman, Joseph Meyer, George Conrad, B. M'Colgan, Wm. Murray, Miss M. Gillespie, Andrew Beck.

Districts.
Yoder, Blacklick, Carroll, Chest, Washint'n, Ebensburg, Gallitzin, Chest, Washt'n, Johnst'wn, Loreto, Conen'gh, Munster, Conen'gh, Susq'han, White, Clearfield, Richland, Wash'n, Croyle, Wash'n, S'mmerhill.

CHURCHES, MINISTERS, &c.

Presbyterian—Rev. D. HARRISON, Pastor.—Preaching every Sabbath morning at 10 o'clock, and in the evening at 6 o'clock. Sabbath School at 9 o'clock. A. M. Prayer meeting every Thursday evening at 6 o'clock. Methodist Episcopal Church—Rev. J. SPANE, Preacher in charge. Rev. J. M. SMITH, Assistant. Preaching every Sabbath, alternately at 10 o'clock in the morning, or 7 in the evening. Sabbath School at 9 o'clock. A. M. Prayer meeting every Thursday evening at 7 o'clock. Wesleyan—Rev. L. R. POWELL, Pastor.—Preaching every Sabbath morning at 10 o'clock, and in the evening at 9 o'clock. Sabbath School at 1 o'clock. P. M. Prayer meeting on the first Monday evening of each month; and on every Tuesday, Thursday and Friday evening, excepting the first week in each month. Calvinistic Methodist—Rev. JOHN WILLIAMS, Pastor.—Preaching every Sabbath morning at 10 o'clock, and in the evening at 7 o'clock. Sabbath School at 7 o'clock. Society every Tuesday evening at 7 o'clock. Disciples—Rev. WM. LLOYD, Pastor.—Preaching every Sabbath morning at 10 o'clock. Particular Baptists—Rev. DAVID JENKINS, Pastor.—Preaching every Sabbath evening at 7 o'clock. Sabbath School at 1 o'clock. P. M. Prayer meeting every Sabbath morning at 10 o'clock and Vespers at 4 o'clock in the evening.

EBENSBURG MAILS.

MAILS ARRIVE.
Eastern, daily, at 11 o'clock. A. M.
Western, " " 10 " P. M.

MAILS CLOSE.
Eastern, daily, at 4 o'clock. P. M.
Western, " " 6 " A. M.

The Mails from Butler, Indiana, Strongstown, &c., arrive on Tuesday and Friday of each week, at 5 o'clock. Mails on Mondays and Thursdays at 7 o'clock. A. M.

The Mails from Newmarket, Mills, Carrolltown, &c., arrive on Monday and Friday of each week, at 3 o'clock. P. M.

Leave Ebensburg on Tuesdays and Saturdays, at 7 o'clock. A. M.

Post Office open on Sundays from 9 to 10 o'clock. A. M.

RAILROAD SCHEDULE.

WILMORE STATION.
West—Express Train, leaves at 8.55 A. M.
" Mail Train, " 8.07 P. M.
East—Express Train, " 7.18 P. M.
" Fast Line, " 12.12 P. M.
" Mail Train, " 6.08 A. M.

COUNTY OFFICERS.

Judges of the Courts—President, Hon. Geo. Fisher, Esq.; Associates, George W. Fisher, Esq., Richard Jones, Jr., Esq., Prothonotary, Joseph M. Donald, Esq., Clerk to Prothonotary, Robert A. McCoy, Esq., Register and Recorder, Michael Hasson, Esq., Deputy Register and Recorder, John Scamman, Esq.

Sheriff—Robert P. Linton.
Deputy Sheriff—George C. K. Zahm.
District Attorney—Philip S. Noon.
County Commissioners—John Bear, Abel Lloyd, David T. Storm.
Clerk to Commissioners—George C. K. Zahm.
Council to Commissioners—John S. Rhey.
Treasurer—John A. Blair.
Poor House Directors—David O'Harrow, Michael M'Guire, Jacob Horner.
Poor House Treasurer—George C. K. Zahm.
Poor House Steward—James J. Taylor.
Mobile Appraisers—Thomas M'Connell, Esq., Henry Hawk, John F. Stull, E. F. Lytle.
County Surveyor—E. A. Vickroy.
Coroner—James S. Todd.
Superintendent of Common Schools—T. A. Maguire.

EBENSBURG BOR. OFFICERS.

Justices of the Peace—David H. Roberts, Harrison Kinkead.
Burgess—Andrew Lewis.
Town Council—William Kittell, William K. Piper, Charles Owens, J. C. Noon, Edward Shoemaker.
Clerk to Council—T. D. Litzinger.
Borough Treasurer—George Gurley.
Weigh Master—William Davis.
School Directors—Edward Glass, William Davis, Reese S. Lloyd, John J. Lloyd, Morris J. Evans, Thomas J. Davis.
Treasurer of School Board—Evan Morgan.
Notable—George Gurley.
Collector—George Gurley.
Assessor—Richard T. Davis.
Judge of Election—Isaac Evans.
Inspectors—John S. Rhey, John J. Evans.

POETRY.

Prayer.

Pray, for the purple evening throws,
Her shade on ocean's breast,
Her crimson on the forest boughs,
Her gold upon the west;
The first faint planet mildly gems
The brow of coming night;
Bright as the star on Bethlehem's plain
That cheered the shepherd's sight.

Pray for the cherished ones at home,
The old man's silvery head
That mercies on his closing day
A thousand-fold be shed;
And for the beautiful, the young,
O! pray that strength be given,
Amid the entwining joys of life,
To raise the heart to heaven!

Pray when home-faces circle round,
In happy household glee,
For the stranger's heart, like Noah's dove,
That finds no rest with thee;
And when you raise in grateful joy
The thankful heart to God,
Pray for the anguish hearts that droop
Beneath his chastening rod!

ATTACHMENT.

A STORY OF LOVE AND DEBT.

A curious anecdote was once related to us, with the name of the person and place and the date of the event, which we shall repeat for the benefit of the rising generation, who, in their haste to carry out their views, may commit some mistakes whose effect will be permanent.

Mr. Rhodes was the high sheriff of county, Massachusetts; and his good name inherited from the father and cherished by the son, made him not only popular as an officer, but rather wealthy as a man.

Why Mr. Rhodes had never got married, the ladies could not ascertain, though they talked the matter over and over very often; but almost all said there must have been some cause in his youth, (Mr. Rhodes was thirty-five at least,) which was known only to himself, and perhaps one other.

"Some disappointment," remarked Miss Anna, a young lady who thought it wrong that gentlemen should be disappointed; "some fatal disappointment."

"Not at all," said her maiden aunt, "not at all; nobody ever thought that Mr. Rhodes had courage enough to offer himself to a lady. He is so modest, that I should like to see him make a proposal."

"No doubt of it aunt, no doubt of it; and to him too," said Anna.

"Your father and I," said Anna's mother, "once thought that Mr. Rhodes would certainly marry Miss Susan Morgan, who then lived in the neighborhood."

"Was he accepted by Miss Morgan?" asked Anna.

"I don't believe she ever had an offer," said aunt Arabella.

"Perhaps not," said Mrs. Wilton, "but she certainly deserved one from Mr. Rhodes and I have frequently thought that, during services in the church, he was about to make proposals before all the congregation, as he kept his eye continually on her."

"Do you think," asked Anna, "that Miss Morgan was fond of him as he appeared to be of her?"

"She certainly did not take the same means of showing her feelings," said Mrs. Wilton, "for she never looked at him in church, and seemed to blush when by any means she discovered that others had noticed his gazing upon her."

"I should think," said Anna partly aside, "that a man like Mr. Rhodes would not lack confidence to address a lady especially if she was conscious of her own feelings, and of his infirmity."

Mrs. Wilton smiled, and aunt Arabella was about to say that no lady should ever evince her feelings under such circumstances, when Mrs. Wilton remarked that once, when she had joked with Miss Morgan upon her conquest she rather pettishly replied that she may have subdued him, but he had never acknowledged her power.

"Conquest and possession did not go together, then," said Anna.

"Well, is this attachment the cause of Mr. Rhodes's single condition? Was there no one else at whom he could look at him also?" said Anna, nodding to her aunt.

"No," said aunt Arabella, with a smile "none in the pew to which you allude.—I at least was too strongly impressed with the force of the tenth commandment, 'Thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's ox nor ass, ever to be looking over Miss Morgan, at Mr. Rhodes.'"

* * * * *

One morning, Mr. Rhodes was sitting

POETRY.

Prayer.

Pray, for the purple evening throws,
Her shade on ocean's breast,
Her crimson on the forest boughs,
Her gold upon the west;
The first faint planet mildly gems
The brow of coming night;
Bright as the star on Bethlehem's plain
That cheered the shepherd's sight.

Pray for the cherished ones at home,
The old man's silvery head
That mercies on his closing day
A thousand-fold be shed;
And for the beautiful, the young,
O! pray that strength be given,
Amid the entwining joys of life,
To raise the heart to heaven!

Pray when home-faces circle round,
In happy household glee,
For the stranger's heart, like Noah's dove,
That finds no rest with thee;
And when you raise in grateful joy
The thankful heart to God,
Pray for the anguish hearts that droop
Beneath his chastening rod!

ATTACHMENT.

A STORY OF LOVE AND DEBT.

A curious anecdote was once related to us, with the name of the person and place and the date of the event, which we shall repeat for the benefit of the rising generation, who, in their haste to carry out their views, may commit some mistakes whose effect will be permanent.

Mr. Rhodes was the high sheriff of county, Massachusetts; and his good name inherited from the father and cherished by the son, made him not only popular as an officer, but rather wealthy as a man.

Why Mr. Rhodes had never got married, the ladies could not ascertain, though they talked the matter over and over very often; but almost all said there must have been some cause in his youth, (Mr. Rhodes was thirty-five at least,) which was known only to himself, and perhaps one other.

"Some disappointment," remarked Miss Anna, a young lady who thought it wrong that gentlemen should be disappointed; "some fatal disappointment."

"Not at all," said her maiden aunt, "not at all; nobody ever thought that Mr. Rhodes had courage enough to offer himself to a lady. He is so modest, that I should like to see him make a proposal."

"No doubt of it aunt, no doubt of it; and to him too," said Anna.

"Your father and I," said Anna's mother, "once thought that Mr. Rhodes would certainly marry Miss Susan Morgan, who then lived in the neighborhood."

"Was he accepted by Miss Morgan?" asked Anna.

"I don't believe she ever had an offer," said aunt Arabella.

"Perhaps not," said Mrs. Wilton, "but she certainly deserved one from Mr. Rhodes and I have frequently thought that, during services in the church, he was about to make proposals before all the congregation, as he kept his eye continually on her."

"Do you think," asked Anna, "that Miss Morgan was fond of him as he appeared to be of her?"

"She certainly did not take the same means of showing her feelings," said Mrs. Wilton, "for she never looked at him in church, and seemed to blush when by any means she discovered that others had noticed his gazing upon her."

"I should think," said Anna partly aside, "that a man like Mr. Rhodes would not lack confidence to address a lady especially if she was conscious of her own feelings, and of his infirmity."

Mrs. Wilton smiled, and aunt Arabella was about to say that no lady should ever evince her feelings under such circumstances, when Mrs. Wilton remarked that once, when she had joked with Miss Morgan upon her conquest she rather pettishly replied that she may have subdued him, but he had never acknowledged her power.

"Conquest and possession did not go together, then," said Anna.

"Well, is this attachment the cause of Mr. Rhodes's single condition? Was there no one else at whom he could look at him also?" said Anna, nodding to her aunt.

"No," said aunt Arabella, with a smile "none in the pew to which you allude.—I at least was too strongly impressed with the force of the tenth commandment, 'Thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's ox nor ass, ever to be looking over Miss Morgan, at Mr. Rhodes.'"

* * * * *

One morning, Mr. Rhodes was sitting

POETRY.

Prayer.

Pray, for the purple evening throws,
Her shade on ocean's breast,
Her crimson on the forest boughs,
Her gold upon the west;
The first faint planet mildly gems
The brow of coming night;
Bright as the star on Bethlehem's plain
That cheered the shepherd's sight.

Pray for the cherished ones at home,
The old man's silvery head
That mercies on his closing day
A thousand-fold be shed;
And for the beautiful, the young,
O! pray that strength be given,
Amid the entwining joys of life,
To raise the heart to heaven!

Pray when home-faces circle round,
In happy household glee,
For the stranger's heart, like Noah's dove,
That finds no rest with thee;
And when you raise in grateful joy
The thankful heart to God,
Pray for the anguish hearts that droop
Beneath his chastening rod!

ATTACHMENT.

A STORY OF LOVE AND DEBT.

A curious anecdote was once related to us, with the name of the person and place and the date of the event, which we shall repeat for the benefit of the rising generation, who, in their haste to carry out their views, may commit some mistakes whose effect will be permanent.

Mr. Rhodes was the high sheriff of county, Massachusetts; and his good name inherited from the father and cherished by the son, made him not only popular as an officer, but rather wealthy as a man.

Why Mr. Rhodes had never got married, the ladies could not ascertain, though they talked the matter over and over very often; but almost all said there must have been some cause in his youth, (Mr. Rhodes was thirty-five at least,) which was known only to himself, and perhaps one other.

"Some disappointment," remarked Miss Anna, a young lady who thought it wrong that gentlemen should be disappointed; "some fatal disappointment."

"Not at all," said her maiden aunt, "not at all; nobody ever thought that Mr. Rhodes had courage enough to offer himself to a lady. He is so modest, that I should like to see him make a proposal."

"No doubt of it aunt, no doubt of it; and to him too," said Anna.

"Your father and I," said Anna's mother, "once thought that Mr. Rhodes would certainly marry Miss Susan Morgan, who then lived in the neighborhood."

"Was he accepted by Miss Morgan?" asked Anna.

"I don't believe she ever had an offer," said aunt Arabella.

"Perhaps not," said Mrs. Wilton, "but she certainly deserved one from Mr. Rhodes and I have frequently thought that, during services in the church, he was about to make proposals before all the congregation, as he kept his eye continually on her."

"Do you think," asked Anna, "that Miss Morgan was fond of him as he appeared to be of her?"

"She certainly did not take the same means of showing her feelings," said Mrs. Wilton, "for she never looked at him in church, and seemed to blush when by any means she discovered that others had noticed his gazing upon her."

"I should think," said Anna partly aside, "that a man like Mr. Rhodes would not lack confidence to address a lady especially if she was conscious of her own feelings, and of his infirmity."

Mrs. Wilton smiled, and aunt Arabella was about to say that no lady should ever evince her feelings under such circumstances, when Mrs. Wilton remarked that once, when she had joked with Miss Morgan upon her conquest she rather pettishly replied that she may have subdued him, but he had never acknowledged her power.

"Conquest and possession did not go together, then," said Anna.

"Well, is this attachment the cause of Mr. Rhodes's single condition? Was there no one else at whom he could look at him also?" said Anna, nodding to her aunt.

"No," said aunt Arabella, with a smile "none in the pew to which you allude.—I at least was too strongly impressed with the force of the tenth commandment, 'Thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's ox nor ass, ever to be looking over Miss Morgan, at Mr. Rhodes.'"

* * * * *

One morning, Mr. Rhodes was sitting

POETRY.

Prayer.

Pray, for the purple evening throws,
Her shade on ocean's breast,
Her crimson on the forest boughs,
Her gold upon the west;
The first faint planet mildly gems
The brow of coming night;
Bright as the star on Bethlehem's plain
That cheered the shepherd's sight.

Pray for the cherished ones at home,
The old man's silvery head
That mercies on his closing day
A thousand-fold be shed;
And for the beautiful, the young,
O! pray that strength be given,
Amid the entwining joys of life,
To raise the heart to heaven!

Pray when home-faces circle round,
In happy household glee,
For the stranger's heart, like Noah's dove,
That finds no rest with thee;
And when you raise in grateful joy
The thankful heart to God,
Pray for the anguish hearts that droop
Beneath his chastening rod!

ATTACHMENT.

A STORY OF LOVE AND DEBT.

A curious anecdote was once related to us, with the name of the person and place and the date of the event, which we shall repeat for the benefit of the rising generation, who, in their haste to carry out their views, may commit some mistakes whose effect will be permanent.

Mr. Rhodes was the high sheriff of county, Massachusetts; and his good name inherited from the father and cherished by the son, made him not only popular as an officer, but rather wealthy as a man.

Why Mr. Rhodes had never got married, the ladies could not ascertain, though they talked the matter over and over very often; but almost all said there must have been some cause in his youth, (Mr. Rhodes was thirty-five at least,) which was known only to himself, and perhaps one other.

"Some disappointment," remarked Miss Anna, a young lady who thought it wrong that gentlemen should be disappointed; "some fatal disappointment."

"Not at all," said her maiden aunt, "not at all; nobody ever thought that Mr. Rhodes had courage enough to offer himself to a lady. He is so modest, that I should like to see him make a proposal."

"No doubt of it aunt, no doubt of it; and to him too," said Anna.

"Your father and I," said Anna's mother, "once thought that Mr. Rhodes would certainly marry Miss Susan Morgan, who then lived in the neighborhood."

"Was he accepted by Miss Morgan?" asked Anna.

"I don't believe she ever had an offer," said aunt Arabella.

"Perhaps not," said Mrs. Wilton, "but she certainly deserved one from Mr. Rhodes and I have frequently thought that, during services in the church, he was about to make proposals before all the congregation, as he kept his eye continually on her."

"Do you think," asked Anna, "that Miss Morgan was fond of him as he appeared to be of her?"

"She certainly did not take the same means of showing her feelings," said Mrs. Wilton, "for she never looked at him in church, and seemed to blush when by any means she discovered that others had noticed his gazing upon her."

"I should think," said Anna partly aside, "that a man like Mr. Rhodes would not lack confidence to address a lady especially if she was conscious of her own feelings, and of his infirmity."

Mrs. Wilton smiled, and aunt Arabella was about to say that no lady should ever evince her feelings under such circumstances, when Mrs. Wilton remarked that once, when she had joked with Miss Morgan upon her conquest she rather pettishly replied that she may have subdued him, but he had never acknowledged her power.

"Conquest and possession did not go together, then," said Anna.

"Well, is this attachment the cause of Mr. Rhodes's single condition? Was there no one else at whom he could look at him also?" said Anna, nodding to her aunt.

"No," said aunt Arabella, with a smile "none in the pew to which you allude.—I at least was too strongly impressed with the force of the tenth commandment, 'Thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's ox nor ass, ever to be looking over Miss Morgan, at Mr. Rhodes.'"

* * * * *

One morning, Mr. Rhodes was sitting

POETRY.

Prayer.

Pray, for the purple evening throws,
Her shade on ocean's breast,
Her crimson on the forest boughs,
Her gold upon the west;
The first faint planet mildly gems
The brow of coming night;
Bright as the star on Bethlehem's plain
That cheered the shepherd's sight.

Pray for the cherished ones at home,
The old man's silvery head
That mercies on his closing day
A thousand-fold be shed;
And for the beautiful, the young,
O! pray that strength be given,
Amid the entwining joys of life,
To raise the heart to heaven!

Pray when home-faces circle round,
In happy household glee,
For the stranger's heart, like Noah's dove,
That finds no rest with thee;
And when you raise in grateful joy
The thankful heart to God,
Pray for the anguish hearts that droop
Beneath his chastening rod!

ATTACHMENT.

A STORY OF LOVE AND DEBT.

A curious anecdote was once related to us, with the name of the person and place and the date of the event, which we shall repeat for the benefit of the rising generation, who, in their haste to carry out their views, may commit some mistakes whose effect will be permanent.

Mr. Rhodes was the high sheriff of county, Massachusetts; and his good name inherited from the father and cherished by the son, made him not only popular as an officer, but rather wealthy as a man.

Why Mr. Rhodes had never got married, the ladies could not ascertain, though they talked the matter over and over very often; but almost all said there must have been some cause in his youth, (Mr. Rhodes was thirty-five at least,) which was known only to himself, and perhaps one other.

"Some disappointment," remarked Miss Anna, a young lady who thought it wrong that gentlemen should be disappointed; "some fatal disappointment."

"Not at all," said her maiden aunt, "not at all; nobody ever thought that Mr. Rhodes had courage enough to offer himself to a lady. He is so modest, that I should like to see him make a proposal."

"No doubt of it aunt, no doubt of it; and to him too," said Anna.

"Your father and I," said Anna's mother, "once thought that Mr. Rhodes would certainly marry Miss Susan Morgan, who then lived in the neighborhood."

"Was he accepted by Miss Morgan?" asked Anna.

"I don't believe she ever had an offer," said aunt Arabella.

"Perhaps not," said Mrs. Wilton, "but she certainly deserved one from Mr. Rhodes and I have frequently thought that, during services in the church, he was about to make proposals before all the congregation, as he kept his eye continually on her."

"Do you think," asked Anna, "that Miss Morgan was fond of him as he appeared to be of her?"

"She certainly did not take the same means of showing her feelings," said Mrs. Wilton, "for she never looked at him in church, and seemed to blush when by any means she discovered that others had noticed his gazing upon her."

"I should think," said Anna partly aside, "that a man like Mr. Rhodes would not lack confidence to address a lady especially if she was conscious of her own feelings, and of his infirmity."

Mrs. Wilton smiled, and aunt Arabella was about to say that no lady should ever evince her feelings under such circumstances, when Mrs. Wilton remarked that once, when she had joked with Miss Morgan upon her conquest she rather pettishly replied that she may have subdued him, but he had never acknowledged her power.

"Conquest and possession did not go together, then," said Anna.

"Well, is this attachment the cause of Mr. Rhodes's single condition? Was there no one else at whom he could look at him also?" said Anna, nodding to her aunt.

"No," said aunt Arabella, with a smile "none in the pew to which you allude.—I at least was too strongly impressed with the force of the tenth commandment, 'Thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's ox nor ass, ever to be looking over Miss Morgan, at Mr. Rhodes.'"

* * * * *

One morning, Mr. Rhodes was sitting

POETRY.

Prayer.

Pray, for the purple evening throws,
Her shade on ocean's breast,
Her crimson on the forest boughs,
Her gold upon the west;
The first faint planet mildly gems
The brow of coming night;
Bright as the star on Bethlehem's plain
That cheered the shepherd's sight.

Pray for the cherished ones at home,
The old man's silvery head
That mercies on his closing day
A thousand-fold be shed;
And for the beautiful, the young,
O! pray that strength be given,
Amid the entwining joys of life,
To raise the heart to heaven!

Pray when home-faces circle round,
In happy household glee,
For the stranger's heart, like Noah's dove,
That finds no rest with thee;
And when you raise in grateful joy
The thankful heart to God,
Pray for the anguish hearts that droop
Beneath his chastening rod!

ATTACHMENT.

A STORY OF LOVE AND DEBT.

A curious anecdote was once related to us, with the name of the person and place and the date of the event, which we shall repeat for the benefit of the rising generation, who, in their haste to carry out their views, may commit some mistakes whose effect will be permanent.

Mr. Rhodes was the high sheriff of county, Massachusetts; and his good name inherited from the father and cherished by the son, made him not only popular as an officer, but rather wealthy as a man.

Why Mr. Rhodes had never got married, the ladies could not ascertain, though they talked the matter over and over very often; but almost all said there must have been some cause in his youth, (Mr. Rhodes was thirty-five at least,) which was known only to himself, and perhaps one other.

"Some disappointment," remarked Miss Anna, a young lady who thought it wrong that gentlemen should be disappointed; "some fatal disappointment."

"Not at all," said her maiden aunt, "not at all; nobody ever thought that Mr. Rhodes had courage enough to offer himself to a lady. He is so modest, that I should like to see him make a proposal."

"No doubt of it aunt, no doubt of it; and to him too," said Anna.

"Your father and I," said Anna's mother, "once thought that Mr. Rhodes would certainly marry Miss Susan Morgan, who then lived in the neighborhood."

"Was he accepted by Miss Morgan?" asked Anna.

"I don't believe she ever had an offer," said aunt Arabella.

"Perhaps not," said Mrs. Wilton, "but she certainly deserved one from Mr. Rhodes and I have frequently thought that, during services in the church, he was about to make proposals before all the congregation, as he kept his eye continually on her."

"Do you think," asked Anna, "that Miss Morgan was fond of him as he appeared to be of her?"

"She certainly did not take the same means of showing her feelings," said Mrs. Wilton, "for she never looked at him in church, and seemed to blush when by any means she discovered that others had noticed his gazing upon her."

"I should think," said Anna partly aside, "that a man like Mr. Rhodes would not lack confidence to address a lady especially if she was conscious of her own feelings, and of his infirmity."

Mrs. Wilton smiled, and aunt Arabella was about to say that no lady should ever evince her feelings under such circumstances, when Mrs. Wilton remarked that once, when she had joked with Miss Morgan upon her conquest she rather pettishly replied that she may have subdued him, but he had never acknowledged her power.

"Conquest and possession did not go together, then," said Anna.

"Well, is this attachment the cause of Mr. Rhodes's single condition? Was there no one else at whom he could look at him also?" said Anna, nodding to her aunt.

"No," said aunt Arabella, with a smile "none in the pew to which you allude.—I at least was too strongly impressed with the force of the tenth commandment, 'Thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's ox nor ass, ever to be looking over Miss Morgan, at Mr. Rhodes.'"

* * * * *

One morning, Mr. Rhodes was sitting

POETRY.

Prayer.

Pray, for the purple evening throws,
Her shade on ocean's breast,
Her crimson on the forest boughs,
Her gold upon the west;
The first faint planet mildly gems
The brow of coming night;
Bright as the star on Bethlehem's plain
That cheered the shepherd's sight.

Pray for the cherished ones at home,
The old man's silvery head
That mercies on his closing day
A thousand-fold be shed;
And for the beautiful, the young,
O! pray that strength be given,
Amid the entwining joys of life,
To raise the heart to heaven!

Pray when home-faces circle round,
In happy household glee,
For the stranger's heart, like Noah's dove,
That finds no rest with thee;
And when you raise in grateful joy
The thankful heart to God,
Pray for the anguish hearts that droop
Beneath his chastening rod!

ATTACHMENT.

A STORY OF LOVE AND DEBT.

A curious anecdote was once related to us, with the name of the person and place and the date of the event, which we shall repeat for the benefit of the rising generation, who, in their haste to carry out their views, may commit some mistakes whose effect will be permanent.

Mr. Rhodes was the high sheriff of county, Massachusetts; and his good name inherited from the father and cherished by the son, made him not only popular as an officer, but rather wealthy as a man.

Why Mr. Rhodes had never got married, the ladies could not ascertain, though they talked the matter over and over very often; but almost all said there must have been some cause in his youth, (Mr. Rhodes was thirty-five at least,) which was known only to himself, and perhaps one other.

"Some disappointment," remarked Miss Anna, a young lady who thought it wrong that gentlemen should be disappointed; "some fatal disappointment."

"Not at all," said her maiden aunt, "not at all; nobody ever thought that Mr. Rhodes had courage enough to offer himself to a lady. He is so modest, that I should like to see him make a proposal."

"No doubt of it aunt, no doubt of it; and to him too," said Anna.

"Your father and I," said Anna's mother, "once thought that Mr. Rhodes would certainly marry Miss Susan Morgan, who then lived in the neighborhood."

"Was he accepted by Miss Morgan?" asked Anna.

"I don't believe she ever had an offer," said aunt Arabella.

"Perhaps not," said Mrs. Wilton, "but she certainly deserved one from Mr. Rhodes and I have frequently thought that, during services in the church, he was about to make proposals before all the congregation, as he kept his eye continually on her."

"Do you think," asked Anna, "that Miss Morgan was fond of him as he appeared to be of her?"

"She certainly did not take the same means of showing her feelings," said Mrs. Wilton, "for she never looked at him in church, and seemed to blush when by any means she discovered that others had noticed his gazing upon her."

"I should think," said Anna partly aside, "that a man like Mr. Rhodes would not lack confidence to address a lady especially if she was conscious of her own feelings, and of his infirmity."

Mrs. Wilton smiled, and aunt Arabella was about to say that no lady should ever evince her feelings under such circumstances, when Mrs. Wilton remarked that once, when she had joked with Miss Morgan upon her conquest she rather pettishly replied that she may have subdued him, but he had never acknowledged her power.

"Conquest and possession did not go together, then," said Anna.

"Well, is this attachment the cause of Mr. Rhodes's single condition? Was there no one else at whom he could look at him also?" said Anna, nodding to her aunt.

"No," said aunt Arabella, with a smile "none in the pew to which you allude.—I at least was too strongly impressed with the force of the tenth commandment, 'Thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's ox nor ass, ever to be looking over Miss Morgan, at Mr. Rhodes.'"

* * * * *

One morning, Mr. Rhodes was sitting

POETRY.

Prayer.

Pray, for the purple evening throws,
Her shade on ocean's breast,
Her crimson on the forest boughs,
Her gold upon the west;
The first faint planet mildly gems
The brow of coming night;
Bright as the star on Bethlehem's plain
That cheered the shepherd's sight.

Pray for the cherished ones at home,
The old man's silvery head
That mercies on his closing day
A thousand-fold be shed;
And for the beautiful, the young,
O! pray that strength be given,
Amid the entwining joys of life,
To raise the heart to heaven!

Pray when home-faces circle round,
In happy household glee,
For the stranger's heart, like Noah's dove,
That finds no rest with thee;
And when you raise in grateful joy
The thankful heart to God,
Pray for the anguish hearts that droop
Beneath his chastening rod!

ATTACHMENT.

A STORY OF LOVE AND DEBT.

A curious anecdote was once related to us, with the name of the person and place and the date of the event, which we shall repeat for the benefit of the rising generation, who, in their haste to carry out their views, may commit some mistakes whose effect will be permanent.

Mr. Rhodes was the high sheriff of county, Massachusetts; and his good name inherited from the father and cherished by the son, made him not only popular as an officer, but rather wealthy as a man.

Why Mr. Rhodes had never got married, the ladies could not ascertain, though they talked the matter over and over very often; but almost all said there must have been some cause in his youth, (Mr. Rhodes was thirty-five at least,) which was known only to himself, and perhaps one other.

"Some disappointment," remarked Miss Anna, a young lady who thought it wrong that gentlemen should be disappointed; "some fatal disappointment."

"Not at all," said her maiden aunt, "not at all; nobody ever thought that Mr. Rhodes had courage enough to offer himself to a lady. He is so modest, that I should like to see him make a proposal."

"No doubt of it aunt, no doubt of it; and to him too," said Anna.

"Your father and I," said Anna's mother, "once thought that Mr. Rhodes would certainly marry Miss Susan Morgan, who then lived in the neighborhood."

"Was he accepted by Miss Morgan?" asked Anna.

"I don't believe she ever had an offer," said aunt Arabella.

"Perhaps not," said Mrs. Wilton, "but she certainly deserved one from Mr. Rhodes and I have frequently thought that, during services in the church, he was about to make proposals before all the congregation, as he kept his eye continually on her."

"Do you think," asked Anna, "that Miss Morgan was fond of him as he appeared to be of her?"

"She certainly did not take the same means of showing her feelings," said Mrs. Wilton, "for she never looked at him in church, and seemed to blush when by any means she discovered that others had noticed his gazing upon her."

"I should think," said Anna partly aside, "that a man like Mr. Rhodes would not lack confidence to address a lady especially if she was conscious of her own feelings, and of his infirmity."

Mrs. Wilton smiled, and aunt Arabella was about to say that no lady should ever evince her feelings under such circumstances, when Mrs. Wilton remarked that once, when she had joked with Miss Morgan upon her conquest she rather pettishly replied that she may have subdued him, but he had never acknowledged her power.

"Conquest and possession did not go together, then," said Anna.

"Well, is this attachment the cause of Mr. Rhodes's single condition? Was there no one else at whom he could look at him also?" said Anna, nodding to her aunt.

"No," said aunt Arabella, with a smile "none in the pew to which you allude.—I at least was too strongly impressed with the force of the tenth commandment, 'Thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's ox nor ass, ever to be looking over Miss Morgan, at Mr. Rhodes.'"

* * * * *

One morning, Mr. Rhodes was sitting

There are for the Pitts...

There are for the Pitts...